18/ ALUMNI STORIES
Sgt. Tuffield "Tuffy" Latour leads members of the U.S. men's and women's skeleton teams to medals in Sochi.
One of my main motivations for assuming the leadership of Ashford was working with such a talented, energetic, and passionate team. Everyone is so terrific! Clearly all are working hard to advance the mission of the University.

What is most inspiring to me about my position at Ashford is the ability to work with others to improve the quality of the academic experience for our students. As our programs continue to improve, the high quality of learning will allow our students to more easily and effectively become the professionals they know they can be, with the skills, knowledge, and competencies to grow in their careers.

Enjoy the issue!

Sincerely,

Dr. Lori Williams

In California alone, there are more than 2,500 Ashford students slated to graduate in 2014. "Moving commencement to a west coast location will create more opportunities for students to personally meet the Ashford instructors, staff members, and fellow students who supported them throughout their journey to graduation," said Dr. Richard Pattenaude.

ALL THINGS ALUMNI

by Laurie Bianchi, Alumni Relations Manager

The staff members behind the Ashford University Alumni Association (AUAA) have been hard at work planning exciting new initiatives for Ashford's nationwide community of alumni, including Industry Insight Tours, AU Rewards, My Career, the Alumni Ambassador Program, and the Alumni Tuition Grant. Learn more in this special section, Just For Alumni.
ALUMNI RELATIONS LAUNCHES INDUSTRY INSIGHT TOUR PROGRAM

Have you ever wanted to meet decision makers, learn the inside story on a company, and find people to contact for employment or business opportunities? The Ashford University Alumni Association (AUAA)'s Industry Insight Tours aim to do just that. Industry Insight Tours are designed for Ashford graduates who seek jobs or want to expand their professional network.

Launched in January 2014 at Manpower of San Diego's headquarters, the tour featured Philip C. Blair, Chair and Executive Officer of Manpower Staffing of San Diego, Inc., who spoke about the company and the recruitment industry. Not only did attendees gain insight into a company that has placed more than 500,000 job seekers, but they also received a copy of Blair’s new book, Job Won!, compliments of Ashford University.

The Industry Insight Tour program will bring similar opportunities to Ashford alumni in markets across the country. The program offers a win-win solution for both potential candidates and the companies who open their doors to Ashford alumni. Hosting a tour is a powerfully personal way for companies to meet qualified potential candidates and potentially do some recruiting.

Future Industry Insight Tours will be announced on the AUAA Events page. If you work for a company that might enjoy hosting a group of Ashford alumni in an Industry Insight Tour, please contact Laurie Bianchi, Alumni Relations Manager, at laurie.bianchi@ashford.edu. Finally, if you would like to know more about a leading employer in your area and nominate them for a tour, submit your ideas to alumni@ashford.edu.

We look forward to seeing you at an upcoming Industry Insight Tour in your area!

ALUMNI TUITION GRANT

Ashford University offers an Alumni Tuition Grant to alumni who graduate from an Ashford University or University of the Rockies (Ashford's sister school) degree program and enroll in another online Ashford University or University of the Rockies degree program. Students interested in furthering their education at either school will find the Alumni Tuition Grant helps eliminate some costs associated with doing so.

Gwendolyn Bates of San Diego, CA is just one of many alumni who have taken advantage of the Alumni Tuition Grant. After earning a Bachelor of Arts in Organizational Management from Ashford in 2013, she immediately reenrolled at Ashford and applied the Alumni Tuition Grant toward her Master of Business Administration program, graduating in 2012.

...with the degrees, I am more credible and competent.

With my degrees, I am able to view my company from a professional business perspective," she says, "I've been able to implement trend forecasts, marketing and SWOT [strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats] analysis, surveys, population samples, and a financial plan for growth and exit. The degrees have given me greater professionalism and self-confidence in owning and operating a business."

In addition to her many duties as a fledgling business owner, this busy mom is also president of her children's elementary school, a PTA board member, and a military spouse who serves as Ombudsman encompassing over eight Naval bases in San Diego. "Ashford has given me self-assurance in reorganizing my company to operate it with assertiveness and poise. I also feel that with the degrees, I am more credible and competent. I feel distinguished and accomplished as an Ashford alumnus."

ALUMNI AMBASSADOR PROGRAM

This summer, the Alumni Relations Department plans to launch the University's first Alumni Ambassador Program. Get more information and updates on alumni programs.

Ashford alumni are able to take advantage of many benefits and programs, including the Alumni Ambassador program.
Nearly 150 Ashford University students, alumni, faculty members, and executives from the San Diego business community gathered on March 4, 2014 for the launch of the Forbes School of Business speaker series. Held at the University Club Atop San Diego’s Symphony Towers, the event was the first in a line of speaking engagements designed to bring prominent business experts to the Ashford University’s Forbes School of Business community. The first speaker invited was Forbes Media’s Chairman and Editor-in-Chief himself, Steve Forbes.
A significant benefit of the partnership between Ashford University and Forbes Media (more on page 4), the speaker series offers the Forbes School of Business community access to events and webinars featuring Forbes' extensive roster of approximately 1,200 international contributors. A diverse mix of high-level business leaders and forward thinkers will engage with the Ashford community throughout the year. These events will be live streamed and/or recorded in order to allow the entire Ashford community to participate. Ashford's leadership will curate the speakers' backgrounds and the topics covered for relevance to the programs offered by the Forbes School of Business.

While the series is hosted by the Forbes School of Business, all Ashford students and alumni are invited, and the live stream will be open to all students and alumni as well. Additionally, adjunct faculty and staff members around the country will be invited to attend so that students and alumni can connect with them.
"Our mission is to provide quality education, and we are excited to have Forbes as a strategic partner in that mission."

While introducing Steve Forbes at March’s inaugural event, Ashford University President and Chief Executive Officer Dr. Richard Pattenauz referred to the speaker series launch as a symbolic event, part of the University’s journey to becoming one of the nation’s best private online institutions. “When discussions of an alliance between Ashford University and Forbes Media began, one aspect I was most excited about was the chance for Ashford students to hear directly from the knowledgeable experts associated with Forbes Media,” said Dr. Pattenauz. “Our mission is to provide quality education, and we are excited to have Forbes as a strategic partner in that mission. I’m pleased to say that more than 250 Forbes School of Business courses already reflect Forbes’ rich intellectual content in their curriculum.”

In his powerful presentation, Forbes addressed the state of the global economy, from the significance of the current (as of press time) Russia-Ukraine conflict to taxation in the United States, health care, monetary issues, entrepreneurship, and even Bitcoins. Forbes also addressed the future of the US economy, forecasting growth and improvement in 2014.

"With credit markets evening out and bank lending growing again, the US economy should be better this year than it has been in the last four years," Forbes told the students. "Study at Ashford and get ready for another period of global prosperity."

The public can watch a short overview video of the event on Ashford’s YouTube channel. Additionally, students and alumni should keep an eye out for the presentation in its entirety, available exclusively to them, in the Student Portal. Parts of the presentation will also be built into Forbes School of Business curriculum for current students.

The next event in the speaker series will feature Ken Fisher – Founder, Chairman, and CEO of Fisher Investments. Fisher is a top investment analyst on the 2013 Forbes 400 list of richest Americans and Forbes list of world billionaires. He will be speaking and participating in a meet-and-greet at Ashford’s Clinton, IA campus on May 3 during Spring 2014 commencement weekend. Though the deadline to RSVP occurred before press time of this publication, look for exclusive invitations for upcoming Forbes School of Business Speaker Series events in the near future!"
"The purpose of business is to produce happiness, not to pile up money."
Ashford University celebrated its Fall commencement on Sunday, October 13, 2013. More than 700 graduates and nearly 4,000 guests traveled to the Clinton, IA area to attend the graduation ceremony. Ashford graduated a total of 7,563 students since the University's previous commencement ceremonies in May. The ceremonies in Moline, IL capped off a weekend of celebration that began on October 12 with a variety of events for graduates and their families at Ashford’s Clinton campus. We’ve gathered some highlights from the weekend to share with you here!

A TALE OF 4 MBAS

4 classmates meet in person for the first time – and unexpectedly – at their commencement ceremony.

"It was great to be able to put a face and voice to the names!"

Throughout their Master of Business Administration (MBA) Marketing specialization program – and especially in their final course – classmates Richard Rosas, Marti Foley, Bobby Antee, and Sara Schaeffer-Aslop provided support and encouragement for one another in the form of discussion board posts and group emails.

"Not only did we discuss the topics set forth by the professor," explains Richard, a Senior Rare Disease Specialist at Novartis, but we would lean on each other and encourage one another.”

The coursework wasn’t easy, but when all was said and done, all four were officially MBAs! And though they continued to stay connected through social media, they hadn’t thought to communicate about whether anyone else in the group was attending the Fall 2013 commencement ceremony in Illinois. After all, they were from such far-flung locations as Texas, New York, and California.

So imagine their surprise not only to hear each other’s names called out at the ceremony, but to discover they were only seats away from each other!

Marti, a global marketing communications manager who hopes to work her way up to a director position, describes her delight upon being able to meet her support network in person. "It was really funny to all of a sudden hear someone’s name called that you recognize. Then I heard the other two names, and it just fell into place that our whole group was there. We hugged each other as soon as the ceremony was over. I felt connected and like I really belonged at that point with people who knew me and I knew them.”

Adds Sara-Schaeffer-Aslop, a product support manager at Hewlett-Packard Company, "It was great to be able to put a face and voice to the names!" And Bobby, a senior consultant and aspiring entrepreneur, says, "I was so happy to see them. It was a wonderful feeling!"

Although the four in this group became particularly close, they also point out the strength of the learning community as a whole. Bobby calls his Ashford classmates "always passionate and willing to help. They push you further than just answering questions." Marti says, "We collaborated and bounced ideas off each other and were able to teach one another from our experiences and interpretations of the material we were learning. We communicated as much as possible to get the most out of the program."

Additionally, all four in the group have seen positive results professionally from having earned their MBAs. "In the past," explains Marti, "I was invited to high level professional meetings in which topics were discussed that I didn’t understand, so I wasn’t able to contribute. During my degree program, I learned the terminology and what it all meant, so I am now able to contribute and be a member that people turn to for help on their projects."

Bobby says, "I have used my knowledge with my current position by implementing projects and setting up presentation material." Sara points out that she is "empowered to better summarize financial results and better communicate her summaries," while Richard says, "My degree has helped me sharpen my skills and apply them to my current position."

Of the ceremony, Richard adds, "Encountering these classmates was one of my biggest surprises at commencement. They, along with my family and close friends, understood the work that was necessary to get to that day. Participating in commencement will be an experience I will always remember." Sara agrees, saying, "I made a point to remind myself to take it all in and store the memories away so I can recall them, since this will most likely be my last commencement ceremony."

In closing, says Marti, "I dedicated 22 months of my life toward this and I’m so glad I did, so I can cross it off my bucket list and not have any regrets. Meeting my classmates in person at commencement was the icing on the cake!"

AN INTERVIEW WITH STEDMAN GRAHAM

by Lorelei Potoczny

The official commencement speaker for the Fall 2013 Commencement Ceremony was none other than educator, author, and businessman Stedman Graham. He is Chairman and CEO of S. Graham & Associates (SGA), an adjunct professor to several universities around the country, and has authored eleven books, including two New York Times bestsellers. His latest release is "Identity: Your Passport to Success." Graham’s presentations on the topics of identity development, maximizing leadership, achieving success, and personal and professional branding are driven by his Nine-Step Success Process, a life and learning management system designed to organize your life around your identity. We got the chance to sit down and talk with him after he addressed the crowd of about 4,700 people at commencement.

Ashford Connections (AC): As an educator, author, and speaker, how would you describe the work you do in a nutshell?

Stedman Graham (SG): I teach identity development, I teach people how to find out who they are, how to take education and information and make it relevant to their purpose in life, and then transfer it to their minds - and then transfer it to the American free enterprise system in the global marketplace so they can organize a life around themselves and shape their future.

AC: Tell us a little bit about growing up and your first jobs, and how you got from there to where you are today?

SG: I grew up in a small town; Whitesboro, NJ. I was a basketball player, I went to college, and after I graduated I went into the service and played ball in Europe. After the service I worked in the prison system for 5 years. That wasn't my first job (though my first job was [as] a short order cook on the beach, which I got fired from because I ate too many of the profits. [Laughter]. But I worked in the prison system for 5 years, in public relations and marketing for years - I used to own an advertising company - I worked in the sports marketing industry, and now I've dedicated my life to education and teaching people about identity development leadership.

AC: Talk about what reinvention means to you in the 21st century, and how adult learners tie in to that concept.

SG: Reinvention means that you have to prepare yourself in the 21st century, because the marketplace is really changing a lot through technology, and you have to be a lifelong learner and developer. You have to be more of an owner of your own development, stay on the cutting edge, be motivated, have good leadership skills, be a self-starter, and be focused. You have to have where you're going, how you're going to get there, and what the process is. And you have to be able to assimilate into a global marketplace and deal with all kinds of people, so you have to have good relationship skills.

AC: You talk about the difference between having a true identity versus simply embodying the labels we are assigned by society - can you explain this, and how it's relevant to our career paths?

SG: True identity is really being able to get beyond the socially constructed labels that otherwise define you and put you in a box. People are defined by their race, and they get into a box, and they're defined by their family and their background and their job and title - and really, that's not who you are. Identity is about going deeper in your development, trying to figure out what you love, what your talents are, what your skills are, and really what your natural abilities are. Like I said, everyone has 24 hours in a day, so the question is: what do you do with your 24 hours so you can organize yourself every day? Then you can develop a process for continuous improvement.

AC: How can adult learners or anyone else turn their passion into a profession?

SG: The passion is the core. That's your authenticity, that's your foundation for growth and development, that's being able to organize your life around the different things that you love and care about. So it's a process of being able to get to that natural ability and figure out what it's relevant to you, what makes you happy, what you care about, and take that information and make it relevant to that. So I call it developing a strong work-life balance, which is long-term. And to figure out how to clarify what's important to you, and what you should be working on.
